

Waveform Energetics within the fields of Tai chi, Chi Gung and the Healing arts

The trouble with our limited language is that there are so many words used to describe the same thing. The, above mentioned arts have a common thread running through them; that is that the essence of each is direct sensory experience of energetic change. Unfortunately, each has its own language/vocabulary, for example using the words Prana, Chi, Psychic energy, Ki, etc. to describe the same phenomena.

For teachers introducing this concept to pupils it can be an awesome task, getting the experience rather than just the message across.

Waveform was born from the experience of various energetic phenomena and the need to understand and replicate such experiences, as well as the lessons they provide.

We have developed a practical teaching system that promotes the ability to perceive energetic change within and around the practitioner so that there is new awareness of Self

This ability can then be expanded, through teaching and direct experience, to include direct awareness of energetic change within another person - without the need for physical contact. The ability to "listen" to changes in another's energetic field is then fine tuned to enable greater and more efficient reliability

Many students have unfortunately been unable to learn these skills simply due to lack of a dependable teaching system that transcends these language barriers.

Using this system, all practitioners should be able to feel, on a sensory level, energetic changes as they happen. This includes the duration, intensity and source of the change, allowing the practitioner to use their intuitive skill elsewhere in the healing process.

Using the immediacy of Waveform in this way will provide valuable information in terms of the progress of the treatment whilst indicating any further action, which may be needed.

Through learning to use Waveform as a tool, it is possible to cut out many years of ploughing through the "Chi and Prana of it all" where you may find that after ten years or so you reach the same level of perception. It was only after being down that particular road and finding so many dead-ends that it was possible to formulate this new system.

In using Waveform, the languages of science and direct experience are the tools of learning, with science adding explanation and substance to experience whilst providing valuable clues leading to the promotion of other experiences.

Once understood and felt, all participants will find themselves with greater understanding of their art, whatever it may be. This understanding will be at a more profound level removing the necessity of relying on faith in, often alien, mystical, or nebulous concepts, which may be of no practical value to the individual.

Whether you are interested from the point of view of total health, for teaching purposes, or even to gain a stronger grasp of the practicalities of Universal Compassion, Waveform has the capacity to help you on your Path

Copyright © Mike Webster November 1996